

The World Whirls On

By JIM WOOLDRIDGE

In one of the earlier sessions of the present Congress, a prominent senator made the remark, "There's something phony about this war!" At that time he was referring to the situation at the outbreak of hostilities, when, despite the fact that both Allies had formally declared war and had massed a huge army on the western front, they stubbornly refused to make any offensive move against the Nazi forces or to give any definite information at all. The two democracies refused absolutely to allow newspapermen to visit the war zone, and rigidly censored all photographs of army activity. When these restrictions grew even more stringent, the rumor began to circulate that the Allies were making no attempt to prosecute the war, that they were waiting until the high-geared Germans had devoured Poland and made any further fighting futile. It was whispered that Chamberlain would then agree to another Hitler peace plan and the "war" would be over without losing the usual billions of dollars to the arms manufacturers. It was just too bad about Poland.

The rumor grew stronger as the Franco-British forces adopted their Fabian policy of waiting, as the Nazi war-horses rolled over Poland in the "blitzkrieg" that has now become history, as Hitler sued for peace on schedule. The rumor met sudden death, however, for the Allies didn't play the game and refused to accept der fuhrer's peace plans.

It became evident that the democracies had seen the futility of any possible aid to Poland and had realized the impossibility of smashing the enormous Siegfried line. They could not conquer Germany by military might; they would have to defeat her by economic starvation. The British fleet took up its blockade position and prepared to sit it out until the Nazis had eaten their last crumb. The first lord of the admiralty, Winston Churchill, in a significant broadcast, asked his countrymen to keep a firm hold on their nerves, to steel their courage, to ignore propaganda, and of all things, to avoid being bored. As time marched on the wisdom of these last words became apparent. War communique day after day simply said that artillery action had taken place and reconnaissance patrols were engaged.

Even more war boredom was foreseen this week when an official French bulletin announced that the Allied forces had withdrawn entirely from the territory which they had so painstakingly taken during these first seven weeks of hostilities. Their only objective seems to be a defense of the French borders to keep Hitler in Germany.

This Anglo-French blockade is beginning to be felt by Hitler. Lately, he has sent one squadron of bombers after another to attack the English fleet and naval bases. His submarines no longer harass merchantmen; they are ordered to go for battleships, to smash the blockade at any cost.

How long the Nazi government will stand no one knows. It might even be victorious. The key seems to be in the hands of Joseph Stalin, the mystery man of Europe. If he decides to give Hitler supplies, Germany could resist indefinitely, but an authoritative source said last week that Stalin had refused to aid the Axis. He has refused to aid the Axis, but an authoritative source said last week that Stalin had refused to aid the Axis.

LATE DEVELOPMENTS:
MOSCOW—The Russian government newspaper accused the Turkish nation of attempting to drive a wedge between the new Soviet-German alliance by refusing a treaty concerning exclusive shipping rights through the Dardanelles.

The great communistic power, which has been very active in gaining diplomatic concessions by modern power politics method, said that Turkey's refusal was a direct attempt to prevent the interchange of commerce between Hitler and Stalin.

On the other hand, Turkey's rejection raised Finland's stock several points. It is believed that the Soviets desire a Black Sea outlet more than they do another port in the Baltic region, and that Turkey would be the first country invaded by the Red army. Observers believe that Finland and Turkey, by forcing the Russians to fight on two widely separated fronts, might successfully resist the Soviets.

What They Think

By BOB AMMONS

Question

"What happened to you in Louisville?"

What They Remember

Don Kells, Ag sophomore—"The street car we took out to the field caught on fire, and we didn't get there until the end of the first quarter."

Jeanette Graves, A & S freshman—"I saw the movie stars J. Carroll Nash, John Howard, and Olympic Badish at the Brown Hotel."

Marie Brackett, A & S freshman—"We got there late and had to watch through the fence I almost tore it down during that last quarter."

Bill Henderson, A & S junior—"I don't remember."

senior senator from North Dakota, who is slated to address an assembly of Lexingtonians in Memorial hall on the night of November 2. Senator Nye, who was chairman of the committee which investigated the munitions industry, will speak on "Neutrality and Experience."

The talk will be under the auspices of the University Women's club, whose welfare committee is handling the ticket sale.

RHOADS AND NOE TO BE HONORED

Educators' Portraits To Be Unveiled

Two well known Kentucky educators, Dr. James Thomas Cotton Noe, poet laureate of Kentucky, and Dr. McHenry Rhoads, will be honored at 4 p. m. Friday at ceremonies in the auditorium of the College of Education.

Portraits of these two eminent professors of education at the University, will be unveiled and presented to the University by members of Phi Delta Kappa and Kappa Delta Pi, honorary education fraternities.

The portraits, painted by Doris Fitz of Benham, have been framed in old gold leaf and marked with brass plaques as follows: "James Thomas Cotton Noe, Professor Emeritus of Education, University of Kentucky. At the age of 75," and "McHenry Rhoads, Professor Emeritus of Education, University of Kentucky. At the age of 81."

Dr. Wellington Patrick, head of department of history of education, planned the joint presentation and will preside at the unveiling exercises. Dr. M. E. Ligon, head of the department of secondary education is chairman of the program.

Historians' Group Will Convene Here

The University and Transylvania will be joint hosts for the fifth annual meeting of the Southern historical association which will be held November 2, 3, and 4.

Features of the program include a dinner Thursday night, in the Union building, followed by a reception at the home of President and Mrs. Frank L. McVey. Association headquarters will be located in the Lafayette hotel.

Dr. McVey will preside at the annual dinner to be held Friday night at the hotel.

The committee on local arrangements includes Dr. T. D. Clark, Prof. Ellery L. Hall, Prof. Robert G. Lunde, and Dr. Edward Tuthill.

Smith Elected

Mrs. George E. Smith, instructor in English, was elected governor of the third district, International Altrusa organization, at a meeting of the group Saturday at Birmingham, Ala.

The International Altrusa organization is made up of clubs in Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, and Alabama. Mrs. Smith, president of the Lexington Altrusa club was a delegate from the local group.

At the convention Mrs. Smith gave a report on the International Altrusa convention which she attended in Portland, Ore., during the summer. She also spoke on vocational guidance.

Theta Sig Pledges

Chi of Theta Sigma Phi, women's honorary journalism fraternity, will hold pledging services for Jane Day Mavell and Margaretta Ratliff, Sharpburg, at 4 p. m. today in the Union building.

PETITIONS DUE AT REGISTRAR'S ON WEDNESDAY

30 Signatures Needed Before Candidates May File

Aspirants for the 20 upperclass seats on the student legislature must submit petitions by 4 p. m. Wednesday at the registrar's office on the main floor of the Administration building. Voting on these legislative will be held Monday.

The two freshman representatives will be elected at a mass meeting of the freshman class immediately following the upperclass legislative elections. Candidates will be determined by the election board from the freshmen ranking in the first decade on all three classification tests.

Representatives shall number 22, and shall be elected by and from the colleges of the University, with the exception of the two freshmen representatives. Representatives are determined by the proportion of the college enrollment to the total enrollment of the University, as nearly as possible except that no college will have less than one representative.

In colleges where there will be more than one representative the representation will be divided among sexes, and classes.

Petitions are to include: (1) certification by the dean of women or the dean of men's office as to all-university standing of 1.5 or over; (2) statement of college, class, and sex; (3) signatures of at least 30 students of the petitioner's college who rank as sophomores or above.

These signatures must be non-duplicating in that a student may sign only as many petitions as there are to be representatives from his college.

For example, in the arts and sciences college there are to be eight representatives, divided: two senior men, two senior women, two underclass men (sophomores or juniors), two underclass women (sophomores or juniors). An arts and sciences student, not a freshman, may sign petitions of only two aspirants to positions as A & S senior men's representative, petitions of only two aspirants to positions of A & S senior women's representative, etc. Freshman signatures will not be counted on petitions. No freshman may vote for other than freshman candidates for legislative posts.

Councils or governing bodies already established in the colleges will be asked to help conduct the legislative elections in the separate colleges. Students may vote only for representatives from their own colleges.

Representatives of the colleges on the Men's Student council will have charge of the election in their particular college unless these student councilmen are seeking office in the election. If they are candidates, someone else will be appointed in their places by the Men's Student Council.

Representation will be divided:

- 1) law, 1 representative (any student);
- 2) education, 1 representative (any student);
- 3) engineering, 2 representatives (1 senior and 1 underclassman—except freshman);
- 4) agriculture, 2 representatives (1 of these to be a man);
- 5) agriculture, 3 representatives (1 senior man, 1 underclassman—except freshman, 1 woman of any class—except freshman);
- 6) commerce, 3 representatives (1 senior man, 1 underclassman—except freshman, 1 woman of any class—except freshman);
- 7) arts and sciences, 8 representatives (2 senior men, 2 senior women, 2 underclassmen—except freshman, 2 women of any class—except freshman).

French Students Elect And Cast

"Le Cercle Français" announces the following officers: Clarence Albright, president; Harold Dunn, vice-president; and Mildred Gravette, secretary.

"La Nouron" (the nurse) has been selected as the play for presentation by students of French to French classes this semester. The cast follows: Monsieur Pons, Harold Dunn; le Docteur, Andrew Slatt; Detective Pasquillard, Clarence Albright; Made-moiselle Fifi, Mildred Gravette; and Miss Bullfinch, Virginia Krack.

The next meeting will be held at 7 p. m. Thursday, November 2 at the home of B. W. Schick, assistant professor of Romance languages, on West High street.

EDUCATORS PLAN TWO-DAY MEET

16th Annual Congress To Open Friday

The 16th annual meeting of the Kentucky Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools will be held Friday and Saturday, October 27, 28, at the University with Dr. J. L. Harman, president of Bowling Green College of Commerce and chairman of the commission on institutions of higher education presiding at the meeting of the college section which will convene at 2 p. m. Friday, in McVey hall.

The two-day program will open at 9:30 a. m. Friday with a general session in Memorial hall under the direction of President Frank L. McVey. Speakers at this general meeting will be Robert B. Clem of Louisville, president of the Kentucky Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools and principal of Shawnee high school; Dr. Walter Crosby Bells of Washington, D. C., coordinator of the cooperative study of secondary school standards; and Dean William F. Russell of the teachers college, Columbia university.

Meeting at the same time as the college section Friday afternoon, the secondary school section will open its session in the auditorium of the Education building. J. M. Deacon, principal, William Morton junior high school, Lexington, and chairman of the secondary school commission will preside and Dr. Eells will speak.

With President McVey presiding the annual dinner-meeting of the educational conference and the Kentucky association will be held at (Continued on Page Four)

Union Plans "Cider Shag" For Saturday

A source close to the direct-revealed yesterday that the Union will act as sponsor for a "cider shag" from 9 p. m. to midnight Saturday in the Bluegrass room. Free cider will be given, according to announcement. The Bluegrass room will be decorated in autumnal motif. Fifty cents admission will be charged for the hop at which Bill Cross's orchestra will supply the music.

Experiment Station Identifies Diseases

Word From Denmark Names Kentucky As National Salmonella Center

The Kentucky Agriculture Experiment Station has been asked to serve as the American center for the identification of a special group of diseases and will be known as the National Salmonella center of the United States according to word received by Dean Thomas P. Cooper from the International Salmonella Institute, Copenhagen, Denmark.

The term "Salmonella," as explained by Dr. W. W. Dimock, head of the department of animal pathology, applies to the paratyphoid group of bacteria which cause diseases of horses, cattle, sheep, swine and poultry and poisoning of both animal and man.

The selection of the Kentucky station, came as a result of the work of the department of animal pathology with livestock diseases, especially the studies of Dr. P. R.

ISOLATION TOPIC TO BE DISCUSSED

United States' Stand Is Debate Subject

The University debating season will open early in November. Prof. W. R. Sutherland, English department, announced yesterday.

Discussion will be on the subject resolved, that the United States should follow a policy of strict (economic and military) isolation toward all nations outside the western hemisphere engaged in armed international or civil conflict.

Students interested in joining the Debating club are asked by Professor Sutherland to attend a meeting to be held at 3 p. m. Friday in Room 231, McVey hall.

Also at the Friday meeting will be discussed instructions concerning qualifications for the Peace oratorical contest to be held November 29 at Berea college.

Committee Appoints Student Assistants

At a recent meeting of the executive committee of the Board of Trustees the following appointments were made: Bruce E. Dabring and William G. Huskel, research assistants in the College of Commerce for the second semester; John L. Williams, student assistant in the College of Commerce; Mrs. Mary A. LaGrone, student assistant in department of art; John Black, student assistant in the University training school.

Members of the executive committee are Judge R. C. Stoll, chairman, James Park, H. S. Cleveland, and Lee Kirkpatrick.

Band's Top Position On Popularity Front Threatened By Winning Wildcat Squad

By JOHN SAMARA

With the Wildcats hanging up their fourth consecutive victory on the gridiron this season, it begins to look as if an old, and sometimes distasteful, custom may have to be relegated to the scrap heap.

All too true, football spectators have crowded the stadium at Lexington, ostensibly to see a football game, but have gone away praising the virtues of the "Best Band in Dixie."

This year, however, with the team showing promise of a victory cheer report card, it threatens to be a dog-fight between the two organizations for the acclaim of fans. The band, struggling under new leadership, is confident that it will keep its place in the affections of the crowd, but gridiron boys are pining for Kentucky fans too.

With the season well under way the "Best Band in Dixie" is out to defend its title and keep the crowds cheering for band as well as team.

It was way back in 1923 that "Fuzzy" Woodruff, then one of the South's ablest reporters, first gave Kentucky's band preference over Kentucky's football team and dubbed the former "The Best Band in Dixie." The name stuck.

The occasion was a widely fought fray between UK and Georgia Tech, in which Kentucky's inferior, out-weighted Wildcat team came from behind to knot the score and upset the home of B. W. Schick, assistant professor of Romance languages, on West High street.

"Fuzzy" Woodruff thought the two teams plus "The Best Band in Dixie" made a three ring circus of the game instead of two. Next morning he said so in his news story which covered the antics of the band.

Thus, the story has become legendary at the University and tradition has it that when the Wildcat teams come off the football field beaten or tied the fans say, "Well, anyhow, we've got 'The Best Band in Dixie'!"

But, along with the name has come the task of upholding it and this has meant more and more work each year until today "The Best Band in Dixie" literally has become the "Busiest Band in Dixie."

Though most people think of a college band as a gay, colorful troupe tunelessly parading across a football field, that is merely a small part of the work done by the group, and it is after the gridiron wars are over that the band boys settle down to more serious and far more important work.

As the football season closes invitations come flocking in to the University band for concert appearances. Schools in outlying districts, sponsors of charity programs, local merchants, hospitals, and other organizations and institutions are eager to see and hear "The Best Band in Dixie."

Since it is representative of the state university "The Best Band in Dixie" naturally assumes a position as center of all state musical activities, and so the bandmen as a group have taken it upon themselves to play "Big brother" to all the bands and music organizations of smaller schools and high schools of Kentucky. The University of Kentucky band, as an organization, supervises high school contests, band clinics, and music festivals, most of which are held on the campus at Lexington, with band members acting as hosts to all participants.

But contests, festivals and concerts have to be fitted into a program which is already filled with routine activities of a university band such as military parades, athletic events, pep rallies, and campus concerts.

Campus concerts are presented in the stately Memorial hall, but warm fall or spring days take the band and its audience to the campus' Memorial amphitheater. There, in its own background, the band for gets stiff concert routine and the program includes one or more popular tunes, solos and skits by band members, and at least one vocal chorus with the entire company participating.

Because the University is located in the heart of the Bluegrass, Derby Day is THE day on the band calendar. Band members travel by bus to Louisville, home of Churchill Downs, and last spring, with the University of Louisville band and four other Indiana and Kentucky bands, a musical program was provided Derby fans from 10 a. m. until sundown.

Nearly 1,600 Students Take Part In Balloting

President And Two Vice-Presidents To Head Revised System Of Student Government

Bill Duty, Bob Nash, and Jeanne Barker were picked for the respective posts of president, men's vice-president, and women's vice-president, when nearly 1,600 ballots were cast in yesterday's student government election.

A total of 1,579 ballots were dropped into the boxes, 1,075 by men and 504 by women. Because no choice was made or because too many candidates were chosen, six complete ballots were thrown out, two having been cast by men and four by women.

ARMISTICE DAY MEANS NOTHING TO UK AMAZONS

Peace Blackout Seen For Sadie Hawkins' Chase Day

Sadie Hawkins' day is at hand, and Saturday, November 11 will have no more Armistice day significance for the University co-eds than for the warring nations of Europe.

Since its introduction a few years ago, Sadie Hawkins' day has become an annual event at many colleges all over the country. On that day every man is a LI! Abner, pursued, he hopes, by some Sadie Hawkins. Once caught, a man is the exclusive property of the woman who succeeds in tying her tag to his lapel. She will take him to the costume dance Saturday night in the Union forewearing his previous engagements.

Sponsored by Keys, men's sophomore honorary, all proceeds of the dance and tag sale will be donated to the student loan fund. Although arrangements have not been completed, Bill Costel, president of the organization, said that officers are being made to obtain Carl "Don-con" Moore for the dance. Sadie Hawkins tags will be placed on sale Friday, November 10.

Committee Includes Kentucky Students

Four members of the YM and YW were appointed at the recent leadership conference at Berea college, to serve on an economics commission to make a study of the economical conditions in the southern area. The four were Harriet Henderson, chairman; Doris Seward, Bart Peak, and James Howell.

Howell was also elected president of the Kentucky state student YMCA cabinet. Other officers elected were Bruce Weaver, Louisville Municipal college, vice-president and Dawson Davis, Centre, secretary.

The results and information gathered by the economics commission will be given to the entire southern area of the Christian associations to make students more alert to the problems which are defeating the Christian purpose, Mr. Peak said.

Breakfast Is Served

Two hundred alumni and friends of the University attended the "Old Kentucky Breakfast" preceding the Georgia-Kentucky game last Saturday in the Crystal ballroom of the Brown hotel in Louisville. R. K. Salyers, alumni secretary, announced yesterday.

Toastmaster for the occasion was Tom Bullantime, 23, Louisville. Informality was the order of the day as short talks were made by May Joseph Scholtz of Louisville and President McVey.

A feature of the program was the presence of Olympic Badish, John Howard, and J. Carroll Nash, movie stars now making a personal appearance in Louisville. The stars were introduced by Boyd Martin, movie critic for the Courier-Journal.

Phi Beta Pledges

Gail Kern, junior, Louisville; Helen Burks, senior, Lexington; and Grace Oliver, junior, Lexington, all students in the College of Arts and Sciences were pledged to Phi Beta, professional music and dramatic fraternity, at a special meeting held yesterday afternoon in the Union.

Pledged as associate members were Mary King Montgomery, instructor in physical education; Mrs. Robert Dagle and Miss Margaret Warren.

On The Need For Well Chosen Representatives

Representatives will be "go-betweeners" from the student body to higher government officials. They will be the "sommers" of a student voice on matters affecting government of the student body. Representatives must be reporters, judges, must know the problems arising in the University. Above all, they must know their respective colleges and the student population. The student legislature must be actually representative of the opinion, thought, and needs of the student body in every sense. Thus, election of twenty-two representatives for the student legislature demands even greater thought and consideration than choice of president and vice-presidents, for upon the legislature rests the task of making the new student government function to its greatest possible capacity.—L. C.

Senator Nye—And Needy Students

Dean F. T. Jones has estimated that one-fourth of all University students earn all or part of their expenses during the college year. Of this number, approximately 600 are men. Mrs. Sarah B. Holmes, assistant dean of women, has compiled statistics which show that 340 women earned all or part of their way during the last school year.

When it is realized that such a large number of students are comparatively "on their own," the full significance of work done by various campus groups for these students is apparent. Among the leaders in this category is the welfare committee of the University Women's Club.

For obvious reasons, a group which renders such services as buying text books, helping pay tuition, furnishing clothing, making loans, and meeting hospital bills, can not very well publicize its good deeds. Nevertheless, the force of its work is felt by the needy students and by the University.

This year, in order to raise additional funds to carry on the work, the Women's Club is bringing to this campus Senator Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota. Senator Nye, known as a "champion of peace," was one of the authors of the first neutrality bill introduced in the 1936 Senate. At present, he is a leading figure in neutrality debates, and even though he was sponsored by a selfish organization his discussion would be fully worth the price of admission.

But now, with the two-fold advantage of being able to help needy students, and also being treated to a close-up of the neutrality question, every member of the University staff and student body should feel it a privilege to purchase tickets for the lecture.

The Colonel Is "A Hog About Them"

The Colonel went up to the University radio studios in McVey hall the other night, and when he came back down, he was complaining that people didn't tell him these things. It's wonderful, he said.

He raved about the eighteen-piece stall orchestra and swore that those experts who rated our studios among the finest in the nation didn't know the hall of it.

"There are three complete studios up there," the Colonel bragged, "three studios, and they're just about as large and well-equipped as any you'll find." We concluded the Colonel was impressed, that he was "just a hog about them."

So we went up to see them ourselves.

The Colonel was right.—J. C.

Not Only Love Is Fickle

School spirit and pride in team are two associates which walk hand in hand through college years. Looking back through past seasons, it is readily apparent that school spirit has been a fickle thing indeed at the University of Kentucky. Here it has approached the desired level only on rare occasions and has remained completely listless the majority of the time. The fact that a team may lose, not because it lacks light, but because the opposition is stronger, faster, and better, is an accepted fact at most schools.

On this campus, it is the signal for a wholesale disowning of the team by the student body.

At present, the team is on top—both in games won and in student esteem. Enthusiasm runs high and we tell the world that the University is our school and the Wildcats our team. But, lest we forget, each coming game is a challenge not only to the team but to the student body—a challenge to stay behind the Wildcats, win or lose.

A strong cheering section and campus loyalty might possibly spur a winning team to do some better, but the same combination would cause a losing team to fight a little harder and hold the line a little longer. Win, lose, or draw, let's hang on to our new-found pride in the team.

Behind The Eckdahl

By ANDREW C. ECKDAHL

"Beauty," the poet has writ, "lurks in unsuspected realms." We really don't know whether any poet has written that, but if one hasn't he should.

On our way to school this morning we saw a trailer. Now there is nothing unusual about seeing a trailer, but around this one hovered a faint aroma. So we investigated. Inside was—a goat!

A goat, we immediately found, is a thing of exquisite beauty. It had been years since we had seen or even thought of a goat, but the subject evokes tender childhood recollections. We remember a book, "The Adventures of Billy Whiskers," and the time a goat hitched in a cart away with our little brother, then aged four.

But that was long ago—and our aesthetic sense had not been developed. We saw a goat then only as an energetic and somewhat dangerous plaything; we did not realize its beauty.

But we do now. And we want a goat for a pet. The only thing that makes us pause is what our family would say should we come in leading a goat by a string. They probably wouldn't be appreciative.

But we intend to have a pet goat someday. It will frolic in the sun, and we will sit and contemplate its beauty.

It'll make a swell depository for rejected manuscripts, too.

Everybody's back home and happy over the outcome of the Wildcat-Georgia game. It's a swell idea having the game at Louisville; must have helped the athletic coffers no end. We don't see why they don't carry the idea further. By selling students tickets and holding the game a hundred miles away, there were a great many students who didn't attend, which means the athletic department could sell those tickets twice.

Now why doesn't the athletic moguls schedule a game at Louisville, sell a lot of tickets to Louisvillians and play the game, say at Henderson. That means a lot of Louisville people couldn't go, and the department would sell those tickets again. That would make three sales for each seat.

Of course they might have trouble getting people in Louisville to buy tickets for a game at Henderson; they didn't have to worry about that with students.

It's something we haven't figured out yet.

Let's Hope They Run Out Of Mud

CAMPUSCENE

By JIM CALDWELL

... in which the writer opines that professors, like students, ought to be graded ...

Evidently unknown to many of the higher-ups in college education is the fact that most universityes consider the professor under whom they take a course to be equally, if not more, important than the course itself.

We collegians, in our undergraduate stupidity, are prone to believe that if a subject, though it be one of the most important in an entire curriculum, is not taught in a fashion both lucid and interesting, then the advantage in offering that subject has been lost. We have found from experience that the teacher himself holds within his grasp the opportunity either of accomplishing that end, or allowing his class to bog down into a marathon of drudging boredom.

Some professors ably attain the former phase of that alternative. Others, no matter how hard they may try, lack the necessary spark and fail miserably. Still others obviously do not realize that such an alternative even exists.

Ever-conscious of this condition students have fostered a sort of unofficial grapevine system of professorial classification. There are no sure-things signs of its existence, but each September and each February, if one will search out the pucker-browed individuals struggling with schedules, he will realize that it is there.

For at these particular times the most frequently-heard query is that of "Have you ever had a class under Doctor Blank?" This is expanded into "What kind of a prof is he?" and "What sort of a lecturer is he?" These inquiries may seem to the uninitiated bystander to be a sort of questionnaire as to a professor's similarity to a sedative and to his apple-polish ability, but in reality there is a higher motive involved.

Actually, a student, because he knows the professor comprises at least 75% of the course involved, is looking for the man who best can interest and entertain him for the next four months—and still teach him everything about the subject that he ought to know. This may sound like a search for the Holy Grail, but in practice it is nothing of the sort.

There are at least five professors on this campus who are included in the grape-vine's "must" list—that is, everyone who has had classes under them recommends with enthusiasm that every student should take at least one of their courses before he graduates.

On the other hand, there are those teachers who fall without hesitation into the undergraduate "blacklist." These are the ones who are to be avoided at all times, at any cost.

And the impressive thing about the matter is that it all comes about through word-of-mouth—there is not, to our knowledge, a written classification sheet in existence anywhere on the campus.

So it was with pricked up ears that we recently read of a booklet published by an anonymous group of students at the University of California. It was entitled "Guide to Courses," and included candid classificatory comments upon the personalities and teaching abilities of foremost California pedagogues. Sample paragraph from the pamphlet is this: "Ronald L. Olson (metaphorical, oldtime anthropologist)—'Interesting material, old jokes, detailed memory examinations.'"

Another excerpt: "Herbert E. Bolton (history department chairman)—'Excessively dull lectures; study the outline and you've got a pipe.'"

The idea, as we pointed out previously, has been prevalent, if unwritten, both here and, we suppose, over the rest of the nation. Now that the Californians have led the way with a real, concrete classification of instructors, other undergraduates of other schools might take up the torch.

Any day now, we may expect to

Letters To The Editor

October 23, 1939

Dear Editor:
As a former member of the KERNEL editorial staff I am well acquainted with the "don'ts" of KERNEL reporting as advanced by the copy desk and the journalism department. Naturally, I was quite surprised when I read the first-page play given to the political rally of last Thursday night. The tenor of the article seemed to me to violate every principle of fair news reporting, and it was quite discouraging to know that the copy desk committed the miserable error of allowing prejudice and bias to creep into its news accounts.

Just read that story aloud to yourself, and if it doesn't sound like first-class irrelevant opinion and biased news presentation, then you deserve a job on some newspaper which is a leading exponent of slander, libel and misinformation. Regardless of which political party won the blue ribbons in yesterday's election, the fact stands that the KERNEL erred sadly.

As a student I feel that the KERNEL is responsible to me and every other student and not alone to its copy desk, editor or business office.

Thus, when the KERNEL campaigns for democratic principles, it is material to me that the tenets for which the paper fights should appear first on the paper itself. If, after all the campaigning, the KERNEL can allow editorial opinion to creep into supposedly "fair" news accounts, then it has failed where it expects its readers to succeed—at democracy.

Sincerely,
ALLENBY E. WINER

X-Ray Machine Is Housed In Lead To Protect Workers

By BOB AMMONS

X-rays from a 200,000 volt machine, so powerful that it must be housed in a special lead-lined room with walls twenty inches thick, are used to take radiographs of metal specimens in the mining and metallurgy laboratory.

To protect operators and observers from exposure to the penetrating rays of this super-machine, every major safety device known to science has been incorporated in the x-ray room, designed by Dr. Lester Tarnapol, assistant professor of metallurgy.

This equipment, as modern as that of any university in the country, is completely surrounded by lead and is sandwiched in the thick brick walls, the six inch concrete roof, and the 2000 pound door. All electrical connections and wires are brought under the walls and up through the floor, and are cased in lead pipes, which the rays can not penetrate.

The door is set two inches into the floor, and the joint is sealed by overlapping lead sheets, sunk six inches into the floor. It slides on rollers and is so constructed that the machine will not operate if the door is open.

The operator can observe the machine through a thick glass window, twenty-five percent lead, and can control the machine by handles and dials from the outside.

Since high voltage in the air generates ozone, which creates deadly nitrous gases, a special vent of lead baffles and high powered fans draw the ozone out of the room.

The 200,000 volt, oil-cooled machine, housed in the west end of the old Wendt force shop in the engineering quadrangle, was used this summer to x-ray test welds on the all-welded state office building in Frankfort, and to provide a test for qualified welders. Radiographs, when developed, show dark spots—holes to indicate air bubbles and flaws in the weld. Twenty-four new fencing foils, purchased for the fencing team, were x-rayed and found flawless.

A 50,000 volt diffraction tube, especially built for the University, and a completely equipped dark-room for developing the negatives are also included in the installation. The diffraction tube is used in atomic structure research and has unlimited life, while the larger 200,000 volt tube can be used only about 1000 hours.

In contrast to this modern equipment, there is on the ground floor of the Engineering quadrangle an exhibit of the first radiographs made in the South, and some of the apparatus used. These were made under the direction of Dean F. Paul Anderson and H. B. McClellan on February 20, 1896, just five days after Professor Roentgen's memoirs were published. It is the experimental laboratory of what was then the School of Mechanical Engineering, State College of Kentucky.

The Kentucky radio company has shown interest in the work done in x-ray by the University, and has suggested the possibility of establishing a graduate research fellowship in the x-ray phases of radio tube research.

New Radio Series To Be Streamlined

The University radio station now transmits a new educational program over the southern network of the Mutual Broadcasting system between 1:30 and 2:00 p. m. C.S.T. Monday to Friday inclusive.

The program, "Southern School of the Air," is carried to WLAP, Lexington, and then to the Mutual system. Besides WLAP, present members of the network include WCML, Ashland, WGRC, Louisville, and WSIX, Nashville. Other stations will probably be added shortly. Elmer G. Sulzer, head of the studios said.

The new service is "streamlined" for use by adults as well as children in classrooms. Mr. Sulzer declared, included on the programs will be numbers by the 18-piece radio staff orchestra, ensembles, the Philharmonic orchestra, the 100-piece "Best Band in Dixie," and Glee clubs.

Palatable knowledge of dramatized literature, music appreciation, parental education, and science will also be presented.

Chatter Bits

As Told To
GEORGE MARTIN

All we can possibly say to start out is "IT SURE WAS." To quote one campus beauty on the weather conditions—"Umm. What a dance Friday night! Umm. What a game Saturday afternoon! Oh—what a Sunday morning. After the game, the Cottage in Louisville was the scene of many interesting happenings. Corn shocks made most excellent guns for military drills, the music box, with a chair on top of it, formed a swell place to fall off. All in all "It shure was."

The Louisville police department was grateful to Sigma Nu Pi, Pi Epsilon for the traffic cop service he rendered after the game. Ticker Scholtz is a good boy to know isn't he?

A five hour pinning took place on the part of Kappa Sig-Harry Reid and KD Betty Phelps. Joke or no? Sigma Chi Bill Adams invited the good brothers to a party he was throwing at the Big Spring Community Club, Big name band and all the trimmings were to be in order. Guests arriving at 9:30 p. m. found no party. What happened Bill?

The special train leaving Louisville at 10:30 p. m. was lucky to get back here in one piece. Someone with a good measure of forethought took out all the fuses on one of the cars. People in that car were left in the dark some for the first time in their lives. Fun was had by all... as a matter of fact, two hours of fun ensued.

Triangle Moose Nelson had a novel idea before leaving for the game Saturday. He had his return address written in huge letters on his shirt. Good means of identification Moose, must try it sometime myself.

Twenty-five couples of SAE's took over the Air Devils' Inn at Louisville. Granville Clark made a hurried exit but faithfully his good brothers followed after him leaving the inn as peaceful as it was before their entrance.

Lee Bowling reports that the score of the game was thirty to nothing. Wonder what game he saw? He was started in the general direction of the Cat game but must have followed the wrong Highway sign. Phi Delta Rollins Woods acquired a peculiar tone to his speech. Rollins was also a member of the welcoming committee at the "Cottage."

George Lamason is sporting a set of carved up knuckles. He says that he got into a Cat fight this week and it was just too much for him. Phi Tau, Eddie David, wishes it made known that the new University Morons club will not meet in the SUB grill at the next convocation.

When quizzed whether he and Dorothy (DDD) Hillenmeyer ever parked on those numerous dates, Eithau John Conrad quipped: "No, we are always in a U-drive, and it costs too much."

To Visit Centers

Elmer G. Sulzer, University publicity director in charge of the University radio studios, together with Frank Ernest Hill, director of study for the Federal Radio Education committee and Miss Mary A. Sands, from the University of Wisconsin radio station WHA, left yesterday for a three day study of mountain listening centers. They will be

Alumni News --

The alumni of New York and vicinity had a dinner meeting October 10th, 7 p.m. at the Theresa Worthington Grant restaurant 284 Park avenue, New York city. Stephen A. Rapier, ex-student, was chairman of the special committee which consisted of Howard Ingers, 95; Hiter Lowry, 99; Fred Rankin, 97; Joe Shelby, 10; Tobe Smith, 14; Charley White, 97; Rufus Wearer 95. Mr. Rapier sent us the following letter: "Dr. and Mrs. McVey were at the same time both our honored guests and our most excellent host and hostess. Mrs. McVey's ensemble was, undoubtedly, 'demier cri chez Molyneux' with a beautiful corsage of proper dimensions and displacement. (New York exporter speaking.) Dr. McVey threatened to buy asbestos shoes if the heat wave continued.

"We were eighty five strong, placed with mathematical precision in a 'boite de nuit,' and the President had us just where he wanted us. No one could escape without running a triple gauntlet, so no one did. President McVey measured up to everything any of the old alumni could expect of a president of the University of Kentucky. He carried himself with the proper dignity and expressed himself with a 'savoir faire' that was convincing and enjoyable to all.

"He told us about the University that many of us have not seen in years and years. When he came to the 260,000 books in the library, we felt just a little sorry for the present students who have to take them in their stride. Some of the old grads could not recall any library at all as existing in their time. The defeat of Vanderbilt was the highlight of the evening."

PASS TO JONES NETS FIRST SCORE

By JOE CREASON
Kernel Sports Editor

Striking swiftly through the air with a final quarter passing bombardment, Kentucky's Wildcat football team collared the Georgia Bulldogs by a 13-6 score before 15,000 thrill-groggy customers Saturday afternoon on Louisville's DuPont Manual field.

Kentucky drew first blood in the last 8 minutes of play on a long pass from Etnal Allen to Junior Jones only to see Georgia, three minutes later, again deadlock the game on a pass and two short plunges by Jim Fordham. Then, with but seconds remaining to play, the Cats showed their nerve by driving 72 yards to score on a pass, Dave Zoeller to Jim Hardin.

And so it was, after one of the most harrowing, hair-graying games imaginable, that Kentucky remained unbeaten thus far in the year. Except for their one scoring thrust and a drive in the first two minutes that was stymied on the Kentucky 16 yard line, the Buldogs never threatened to score. Meanwhile, the Cats not only knocked at the Georgia scoring door—they pounded. Three Kentucky touchdown excursions were grounded within the 3 yard line as the Georgia defense showed real bulldog tenacity.

Statistics prove that Kentucky had it over the Southerners like a tent over a circus. The Cats rushed the leather 182 yards for 16 first downs as compared to 84 yards by running and 9 first downs for Georgia. Passes were as thick as ants at a picnic with Kentucky finding vacant arms 6 times in 16 shots for 176 yards, while the Bulldogs picked up 101 yards with 6 completed aeriels in 19 tries. Still the Kentucky scoring avalanche was held off until 52 minutes of the game had been played.

However brilliant the Cats played in the closing minutes, their work for the first three quarters was as stale as undated coffee. While the defense held together in pushing back the Georgia drives the flet Kentucky backs were unable to break loose due to faulty and badly timed blocking.

Game Rough On Cats

It was a bruised and battered team of Cats that emerged from the game, which was as rough as a Northwoodman's beard. John Eibner, who played one of the best games in his career at tackle, returned with the initials of some lusty Bulldog carved all over his face, while Captain Joe Shepherd was limping along on legs that creaked like a rocking chair. Practically every other member of the squad who took part in the game received some sort of bruise. Kentucky was penalized 70 yards for roughing while a total of 30 yards was called against Georgia for eye-gauging, elbowing, biting, etc.

Combs' opening kick-off was returned to the 44 by Cate and Kimsey followed with a short plunge over guard for two yards. On a reverse from Cate, Kimsey ankled around end for 28 yards and down to the Kentucky 25 where he was downed by Zoeller and Shepherd. Here the Cat defense steadied and the ball was taken on downs after four futile punts at the line.

Kentucky Starts

Later in the first period the Kentucky offensive guns were rolled out and the march was on. Combs returned a punt 12 yards to the Kentucky 29 and then cooperated with Ishmael to gain a first down on the 40. Dave Zoeller, in his first try at carrying the ball, slashed over left tackle for 22 yards and down to the Georgia 41. A pass to Bill McCubbin netted 12 yards and Combs and Zoeller moved the leather to the 20 with plunges through the middle. Zoeller picked up 3 yards over right tackle but two penalties pushed Kentucky back to the 47. Georgia in turn was taxed to the 32 for holding and Zoeller whipped a pass to Shepherd good to the 20. A drive over tackle by Combs gained to the 15 and as the quarter ended a new Kentucky team came into the game.

With Jones, Mullins and Allen alternatingly carrying the ball, the Cats moved to the 3 yard line where the surge was halted on downs. Matthews punted out to the 40 and Allen returned to the 29. Allen faked a pass and rounded left end for 8 yards and Mullins followed with 4 over the middle. On a reverse Jones moved to the 10 and Allen again added a first down with a 7 yard dip through right tackle. Mullins plunged to the one but two tries by Jones netted only one yard. Allen's last down pass was wide.

The remainder of the first half was calmer than Sunday morning but early in the third period Kentucky again threatened to score. Combs recovered Cate's fumble on the Georgia 33 to start the offensive. Two plunges by Combs over tackle netted 7 yards and Ishmael pounded over center and lugged two Georgia tacklers with him to the 21. Zoeller swung wide around right end and stepped 11 yards before being hit by Fordham on the 10. Combs slipped and gained but one yard at right guard and Ishmael was held for no gain. Zoeller, in two tries, found 7 yards through the middle but the Bulldogs took the ball on downs.

Then Came The Climax

Then, just when the fans had settled down for a scoreless tie, the Cats exploded. With the ball resting quietly on his own 20, Allen faked back and shot a pass to Jones on the 37. Cutting sharply to the sideline, Jones shook the crowd to their feet with a 63 yard sprint for

Calling 'Em Wild

By Joe Creason

For want of a nail, a shoe was lost; for want of a shoe, a horse was lost; for want of a horse, a rider was lost—and so on runs the old adage, ending in the loss of a kingdom. Paraphrasing this jingle, for want of a scoring punch from within the 3 yard line, Kentucky almost lost its unbeaten football standing Saturday.

Kentucky had more scoring chances against Georgia than a deck of fixed cards, but in each instance the Wildcats blew their opportunities like a mouth full of tobacco smoke. Finally, with a finish that might have been borrowed from a Frank Merriwell adventure, Kentucky scored two last period touchdowns for a 13-6 win.

But the victory was hollow because the Cats—in spots—played miserable ball. For instance, early in the second quarter Kentucky drove to the Georgia 3 yard line for a first down but the attack sagged down like a tarpauling full of water and the leather was lost on downs. Eight plays later the Cats really had their golden opportunity—and it wasn't a blonde. Etnal Allen returned a punt 13 yards to the Bulldog 29. Allen, Junior Jones and Noah Mullins moved the line of scrimmage to the 2 but in a couple of plunges Jones could only gain to the one foot line and Allen's last down pass was wild.

Storm Back Again

Then again in the third quarter the Blues stormed to the Georgia 3 yard stripe only to again thumb their noses at a scoring chance. When it came to covering those last few yards—that heart-break highway that leads to the dough—Kentucky was too much like that little man who wasn't there.

Except for these scoring flurries by Kentucky and a futile Georgia try for a field goal in the third period, the battle had been going along about as slow as a neighborhood game of square tag. The 15,000 customers in Louisville's duPont Manual stadium were all ready to draw the curtains over a scoreless tie when Kentucky started to work and the fans' parted company with reason.

Game And Cats Nearly Gone

With 2 minutes remaining to be played, the Wildcats scoring fury that had been backing up all afternoon like flood water against a levee suddenly broke loose.

Allen, from his own 20, faked back, drew a bead and whistled a pass with the accuracy of William Tell to Jones in the center of the field on the 37. Jones cut toward the sideline and running like a Democratic candidate in Mississippi, dashed the remaining 67 yards for a touchdown. Despite the fact that the stands were now ready for a civic straight jacket, the fireworks had just started.

Came Then The Thrills

Five passes and two plunges later Jim Fordham, who plunged like a mobile snow plow, concluded a 67 yard drive by ramming over center for the marker that deadlocked the game tighter than a case of lock-jaw. Even that was but an anti-climax for there was more to come.

With a minute and a half to play, chances for a Cat win seemed hopeless. But Kentucky came back like the ghost in "Macbeth" after taking the leather on its own 28. Dave Zoeller whipped a pass to Jim Hardin, who gathered up the ball on the 36 and ran like a thief down the sideline before he was bounced a marker. His try for extra point was wide.

Eight plays later and Georgia had knotted the count as the crowd went frantic. Two passes, Allen to Eldridge netted 51 yards and moved the ball to the Cat 3, from which point Fordham scored in two tries. Hardin and Eibner rushed in to block the try for extra point.

A tie now seemed inevitable but Kentucky still had aces up its sleeve. Salisbury's punt went out on the Cat 28. On the next play Zoeller shot an 8 yard pass to Hardin, who breezed down the field 47 yards to the 17. Ishmael plunged to the 14 and Zoeller whipped another pass to Hardin in the end zone. Zoeller's try for point was perfect.

Tobacco...opens Doors to Fields where People Live, Work & Achieve

Today there are about 1,000,000 cigar stores, drug stores, country and grocery stores where you can buy cigarettes in the United States. These retailers, and the jobbers who serve them, have built up a service of courtesy and convenience unmatched by any other industry catering to the American public's pleasure.

THERE ARE ANOTHER MILLION people who are engaged directly or indirectly in the transportation of cigarettes to every town, hamlet and crossroads.

IT IS ESTIMATED that there are 1,602,000 tobacco farmers raising tobacco in 20 out of the 48 states. Good tobacco is one of the hardest crops to raise and bring to market, requiring great skill and patience from seed-bed planting to harvesting and curing. The modern tobacco farmer has done well the job of constantly improving the quality of his product.

THE AVERAGE LENGTH of service of the 13,230 people working in the Chesterfield factories, storage houses, leaf-handling and redrying plants is over 10 years. This means that every step in the making of Chesterfields, regardless of how small, is handled by people who have had 10 years of experience and ability in knowing their jobs.

TRULY TOBACCO OPENS DOORS to fields where people live, work and achieve, and Chesterfield takes pride in its ever increasing part in this great industry that is devoted entirely to the pleasure of the American public.

To SMOKERS, Chesterfield Cigarettes have always said, and now repeat, that in no other cigarette made can you find the same degree of real mildness and good taste, or the same high quality of properly cured and aged tobaccos. Chesterfield Cigarettes are made with one purpose only...to give smokers everywhere the MILD, BETTER-TASTING SMOKING PLEASURE they want. You can't buy a better cigarette.
